A SONG OF JUNE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY MAYBURY FLEMING.

The nights of June fade all too soon,
And days of fragrant weather,
When golden skies, in glad sunrise,
Look down on us together;
When moonlight gleams in silver streams
That sing in silent sweetness,
And in your face the love I trace
That makes my life's completeness.
Sweet nights of June, delay!
Dear nights of June, ah, stay!
Sweet, balmy nights of June!

Too soon the bliss of shadowed kiss
Is mocked by leafless hiding;
Too soon the way that love may stray
Is false to our confiding;
Too soon we feel the Winter steal
With chilling breath around us,
And turn to care the joy so rare,
In whose blest arms it found us.
Warm nights of June, away!
Blest nights! Ah, well-a-day!
Warm, joyous nights of June!

Ye'll come again when April's rain
Has bathed the paths that love us,
And May has kissed the flowers we missed
And set kind stars above us.
Loved nights of June! The dearest boon
The loveliest years can tender!
Come back to bless each fond caress
That hallows love's surrender.
Soft nights of June, come back!
Loved nights of June, alack!
Soft, gentle nights of June!

A FIRST OFFENSE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY LAURA ALMONINO.

Miss Marion Taylor—born Mary Ann Taylor—was to be an actress. The fates had decreed it, and she, very strangely, agreed with the fates. Even her parents, though good, God-fearing people, were willing that she should exhibit her manifold gifts and charms to a paying public at a dollar and a half apiece for orchestra seats.

The trouble began when she was at school. Her teacher (himself an elocutionist of no ordinary gifts, etc., etc.—his great specialty being the Queen of the May) advised her to leave school and study for the stage. In fact, he himself was so kind as to coach her some in Lady Macbeth, Queen Catherine, Medea, and like parts. Mary Ann—I mean, Marion—was at that time a bashful, awkward girl of about sixteen years, so that the wisdom of the teacher's selection of parts was beyond question.

After that the desire to shine forth as a star was always with her. Having taken a few lessons in elocution from a lady teacher of the art, she read several times at church entertainments, and her great success with the critical audiences that are always present at such places encouraged her in her ambition.

During this time, too, she improved in her appearance and manners, and by the time she was eighteen years old she had quite a reputation as a beauty in her native city. Any of her friends would have told you at that time that her figure was perfect; her carriage, grace itself; her head, Grecian; her voice, the soul of music. These things taught her the folly of opening as Lady Macbeth; she knew now that Juliet was her forte.

When she saw various managers take out various ambitious young ladies for starring tours, with elaborate printing and wardrobes filling several trunks—the young ladies generally furnished the cash, but she didn't know anything about that—she wished that heaven had made her such a man. The fact that they usually came in again soon—sometimes minus the trunks—did not bother her in the least, for she knew that she would be more successful with the public.

The advertisements of the new stars that spring up to "fill the place" of the dead Virginus or Hamlet announce that a man is found for every emergency. Though this does not apply to managers, Marion at last found hers. Mark Downes was the son of a man that had grown rich in this way: He came to H. (the birthplace of both Marion and Mark) when it was not yet out of its swaddling clouts, and started a general supply store on a small scale. By tending to business (much of what he charged on his books as "molasses") would not have borne inspection by the prohibitory officers of that day, and by investing his profits in real estate in the growing city, he was in a position before we make his acquaintance to retire from active business life. The father was a coarse, vulgar and illiterate man; the son, though he had profited by a liberal education, showed traces of his ancestry.

He had been acquainted with Miss Taylor but a short time when it was apparent that he had outrun all his competitors in the race for the lovely one's favor. Whether or not his ample income had anything to do with this, is a puzzle that does not concern this narrative. To be interested in Marion was to be interested in her designs on the stage, and Mark was soon as enthusiastic over her powers as she herself was. But there was more method in his madness, for it was not long before he had made arrangements to take her out for a tour. This was quite in his line, as he augmented the allowance his father made him by speculation, at which he was highly successful; and he felt that this new venture would far surpass anything he had before undertaken. And it did—but time enough for that.

Being unacquainted with the theatrical business himself, he had the good sense to secure a really capable manager to direct affairs for him. A company was engaged and put in rehearsal; a theatre in one of the large cities was hired for a week; the coming star was worked up in every way known to the experienced manager. But we will pass over these preliminaries which are, after all, too well known to be of interest to anybody, and come to the night of Marion's first appearance.

Of course she was to open as Juliet. It was her choice, and the infatuated backer would have allowed her to play Falstaff, if she had so elected. At the rehearsals she was very attentive to the directions of the stage manager, so far as business was concerned; but she required no instruction emotional drama, and duplicate Marion's success as Juliet with her performance of a modern society belle. So, on Thursday, after two nights of empty benches, the new play was tried before a well-filled house—a house consisting like many a Western "city," of paper, chiefly. High hopes were entertained that the young actress would achieve a success in the new part, less exacting than the Shakespearean heroine, and with no predecessor in the role to be compared with. But her failure was more complete than before, if that were possible. She had had no idea of the character of Juliet, and she was no better now in that respect, while her artificial delivery sounded worse than it did in the blank verse. And that's saying a great deal.

better than they ought to be—and she was worth half a million; so Mark married Miss May.

If Marion Taylor had been content to begin in the ranks, she would have developed into a tolerable actress; but after her fiasco as a star she had no ambition left. Not that she was crushed by the failure—her nature was not strong enough for that—but she simply dropped the whole matter, and went home to be the belle of her circle again. When Mark married, she did not care; but as the years passed, and no wealthy husband came, she wished him back again. But no deeper feeling than this stirred her nature; and after a while she married a mechanic in comfortable circumstances. She makes him a good wife, because she is at her

HE SOUGHT FOR GORE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY CAPT. JACK CRAWFORD, "THE POET SCOUT."

Nicodemus as a boy
Was his parents' pride and joy,
In a cozy little home in Pennsylvania;
But as he older grew,
He began to smoke and chew,
And for reading bloody novels he'd a mania.
He read of "Texas Dick,"
"Bloody Bob" and "Deadshot Nick,"
And others who threw Indians in disorder,
Till his brain was all adame,
And he longed to make a name
That would be a holy terror on the border.
He thought and thought and thought,
Till his blood was boiling hot,
And the spirit of a fiend seemed to possess him.
Then a nice fat greenback roll
From his father's pants he stole,
And left before the good old man could bless him.
Away out West he went,
On his bloody work intent. [curbing—
With a spirit which he thought would brook no
For the first wild play he made,
Thirty days in jail he stayed,
For the peace of Trinidad he was disturbing.
Then onward he did go,
Into fair New Mexico, [him
Where the burning thirst for fame again came o'er
And in Santa Fe one day
He was overheard to say [before him,
That he'd like to have some b-a-a-a-d man stand
A little sawed off chap
Gave his Gatling mouth a slap,
Then out came Micky's little Smith & Wesson,
But one of sawed off's blows
Landed square upon his nose,
And he soon was taught a wholesome border lesson.
As he wandered farther South
His athletic, agile mouth [ing;
Spread the tidings that for blood his soul was crav-
And he yelled and whooped and swore,
In his burning thirst for gore,
But no one paid attention to his raving.
Down to Texas, where 'tis said
Nasty fighting men are bred,
Flew the terror, spitting fire just like a rocket,
But the first week of his stay
He was licked three times a day—
With that awful Smith & Wesson in his pocket.
On and on and on he went,
Eager in his wild intent
That the people as a terror should regard him;
But his craving for a name
And for border terror fame,
Never drew one small admiring glance toward him.
But at last he found a part
Suited to his hostile heart,
For he fell in with a "fake" in Alabama—
Now he soothes his thirst for gore,
Standing scowling at the door,
Taking tickets for a bloody border drama.

MINNIE RADCLIFFE.

This week we present an admirable likeness of Minnie Radcliffe, who made her professional debut in 1884 with W. J. Florence's Co., with which she remained two seasons. Last season she played leading juveniles with M. B. Curtis, and this year she has been with "A Run of Luck," enacting Daisy Copley, the heroine. Miss Radcliffe has had a very brief professional career, yet her prospects for the future are most flattering, and she promises to take rank among our leading actresses at a day not very distant.

NOT GUILTY.

A Kentucky advocate is defending his client, who is charged with stealing a hank of yarn: "Gentlemen of the jury, do you think my client, Thomas Flinn, of Muddy Creek and Mississippi, would be guilty of stealin' a hank o' cotton yarn? Gentlemen of the jury, I reckon not—I s'pose not. By no means, gentlemen—not at all. He is not guilty. Tom Flinn! Good heavings, gentlemen, you all know Tom Flinn, and on honor now, gentlemen—do you think he'd do it? No, gentlemen, I s'pose not—I reckon not. Thomas Flinn! Why, great snakes and alligators! Tom's a whole team on Muddy Creek and a boss to let. And do you think he'd sneak off with a miserable hank o' cotton yarn? Well, gentlemen, I reckon not—I s'pose not. When the wolves was a-bowling, gentlemen, on the mountains o' Kentucky, and Napoleon were a-fighting the battles o' Europe—do you think, gentlemen, my client, Mr. Thomas Flinn, gentlemen, could be guilty o' hookin'—yes, hookin', gentlemen—that pitiful, low, mean hank o' cotton yarn? Onpossi-ble! Gentlemen, I reckon not—I s'pose not. Tom Flinn? Gentlemen, I reckon I know my client, Thomas Flinn! He's got the fastest nag and purtiest sister, gentlemen, in all Muddy Creek and Mississippi! That, gentlemen, are a fact. Yes, gentlemen, that are a fact. You kin bet on that, gentlemen. Yes, gentlemen, you can bet your bones on that! Now, 'pon honor, gentlemen, do you think he are guilty? Gentlemen, I reckon not—I s'pose not. Why, gentlemen of this jury, my client Thomas Flinn am no more guilty o' stealin' that are hank o' cotton yarn than a toad are got a tail—yes a tail, gentlemen! Then a toad are got a tail!" [Verdict for defendant, case dismissed, court adjourned.]

from anybody in regard to speaking her lines—at least, so she thought, and she soon taught the stage manager to look at the matter in the same light. As his employer was present at all the rehearsals, he took his lesson very quietly.

Although the first night's audience was more friendly than critical, it was easily seen before the act drop fell for the second time that the new Juliet was a complete failure. Still, she was kindly treated by the audience, there being something winsome about the girl that aroused their sympathy.

It seems hardly necessary to write that it was her reading that was the most severely criticised the next morning. Her action was said to be bad, her movements awkward; but no word seemed strong enough to use in writing of her delivery, unless it might have been "elocutionary"—though elocution is concisely defined as "a proper delivery of words."

Besides the criticism of Marion's work, Mark Downes had to bear another form of comment that must have been even more trying to him. She had been advertised as a beauty, yet the people to whom she played, more accustomed to beautiful women than were the provincials in her native place, found a multitude of faults in her. Her head was said to be too large, her face to lack expression, her hair to be a poor color. She was accused of having big feet, and hips much too broad for her shoulders. Had these remarks reached Marion's ears, as they did those of her backer, they would have broken her heart, for, with the perversity of human nature, she would have been more sensitive about her appearance—which she could not help—than about her acting.

It had been planned to play "Romeo and Juliet" the first half of the week, and then to put on a new

And, alas! for the style and the elegant costumes from which so much was expected. In her personation of the highborn lady something was at once seen to be lacking. It was the effort of one not born to the purple, and not clever enough to rise to it. The long gowns concealed her feet better than did the Juliet costumes, but under the influence of lourneure and draperies she jettied into her usual walk—not a graceful one, to a critical observer. It was not a walk at all, but a manner of sailing along, induced by her vanity and the attention she attracted at home.

Mark Downes paid the expenses of his venture to the last cent; but in that week he got enough of theatrical speculation. He did not like losing his money very well, either; and, try as hard as he could to avoid it, he could not help blaming Marion to a great extent for his misfortune. His eyes had been opened, too, to the fact that she was not by any means the beauty he had thought her, while her lack of feeling was manifest in the way she took the result of the week's experiment—regarding it simply as it affected herself, seeming to care nothing for his losses, and showing no sign of gratitude for the efforts he had made in her behalf.

If she had treated him differently he might have married her, despite her failure as an actress, but, confident in the power of her beauty to make for her an even better match, she let him go his way. And that way led him a great deal into the society of Miss Dora May, the orphaned daughter of a brewer. Dora—I beg pardon; on such short acquaintance—Miss May, was plain, pedantic, pious and prejudiced. She regarded theatres as the invention of the—in fact, she thought they were no proper level, and her nature is too weak for what might have been to trouble her. She is phlegmatic and happy, and she gets fatter and fatter every year.

THE SEA GULL.

This bird, so numerous on our coast, is a bold creature, caring little for man, and, being never hunted by sportsmen, seems not to decrease measurably in numbers, while other classes of birds have been nearly exterminated. It follows steamers closely, to profit by anything thrown over by the steward or passengers, and in our bays and harbors is constantly seen sailing around seeking stray morsels, although it depends mainly on fish, which it takes with great dexterity. It also consumes various marine creatures thrown up on the shore. The gull is easily tamed, and can be taken far into the interior without seeming to miss the ocean air.

A friend of a naturalist had a couple of tame sea-gulls which ranged the garden freely, one wing of each being clipped to prevent them from flying away. He had also a fine young cat, which struck up an oddly assorted friendship with the gulls. After a while she evidently compassionated their crippled condition, and thought that it prevented them from hunting. So she set to work at hunting for them, and was in the habit of bringing them little birds and mice, which they ate with satisfaction. It is astonishing by the way, what a large morsel a gull can swallow. A gull often takes a large slice of bread and butter by the middle, and, in spite of the narrowness of its beak, the bird contrives to swallow the slice without putting it down or without even so much as breaking it.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

No Replies by Mail or Telegraph.

ADDRESSES OR WHEREABOUTS NOT GIVEN. ALL IN QUEST OF SUCH SHOULD WRITE TO THOSE WHO THEY SEEK IN CARE OF THE CLIPPER POST-OFFICE.

DRAMATIC.

COMMODORE.—Several of the plays you name are copyrighted and you cannot get them. Perhaps you had better refer the entire list to T. H. French & Son, West Twenty-third Street, this city.

W. A. T. Brooklyn.—He can "demand" any salary he likes; but if he gets $30 or $25 a week as a starter he will be lucky.

V. & Co., Philadelphia.—He can always be addressed care of THE CLIPPER. See head of this column.

MANAGER.—Expert authorities here agree with us that words were to be considered a portion of the wardrobe, as much as shoes, jewelry, etc., would be.

M. L. F., Washington.—See head of this column.

G. S. H., South Bethlehem.—You can secure such information by writing to the proprietor or proprietors of each show, as per their route in THE CLIPPER.

ANTHUR, Lake George.—We know nothing of that troupe.

E. H. B.—1. In which of the score of "Rob Roy's" and whether in this country or in England? Make your query explicit. 2. We cannot tell you accurately, because the subject is disputed. A European tried it first, that is certain.

PAOR, H. M., Shenandoah.—1. See head of this column. 2. We do not care to recommend any particular one. Read THE CLIPPER carefully.

J. N. H., Kittanning.—See head of this column.

MISS R. H., Boston.—See head of this column.

T. A. B., Philadelphia.—1. Prof. Griffin received the package. 2. We believe he is still in England. Write to Sam Hague about him.

J. W. W., Fond du Lac.—Address her care of THE CLIPPER, and see the notice at the head of this column.

J. C.—She was alive when we last heard of her; but that was a long time ago.

R. P.—The best we can draw so far as THE CLIPPER's decision is concerned. We have repeatedly refused to decide wagers upon the ages of actors and actresses.

P. T., Milwaukee.—Lester, Allen, Smith and Waldron were the originals.

JEDY.—Not over $25 in either case. You could not easily obtain employment unless you are experienced and clever.

LAWRENCE McAVOY, of the Hibernian Family, is requested to write to his father, who is anxious to hear from him, a death having occurred in the family. Address: Kella Post Office, County Meath, Ireland.

W. K.—Answer next week.

SHOOTY, Boston.—1. Thanks for your expression of good will. We will strive to retain your approbation. 2. There is all the difference in the world between an amateur "hit" and a professional one. Your best plan will be to wait until a benefit occurs for which you can volunteer your services. Once prove your ability in that way, and the road is open to you.

C. S., London.—1. The Peace Jubilee and International Festival, held June 15-19, 1880; the second, or World's Peace Jubilee and International Festival, June 17-19, 1872.

J. H. was not.

J. H. R., St. Louis.—See head of this column.

W. K.—Benjamin Maginley never played in it, but R. M. Carroll did.

I. D. M.—That play can probably be arranged for by consulting A. M. Palmer of the Madison Square Theatre. C. E. Paduan.—Carefully read our city dramatic news this week.

E. M., Detroit.—The prospects seem fairly good for you. See answer to "E. M., Cleveland."

F. A. C., New Haven.—The description of that description would be good, but not at all new; several performers are already doing it, and one or two of them combine it with "some other act," it being too quiet. You might advertise.

"Q. Q. 4 X."—We cannot publish old casts in this company. 2. Write to A. M. Palmer, Madison Square Theatre, this city, enclosing one dollar and no upwards.

C. C. St. Louis.—See head of this column. Address him care of THE CLIPPER.

A. B. C., St. Louis.—About $20, $20 and upwards.

J. K.—We cannot recall the exact poem. Write to Dick & Fitzgerald, 18 Ann Street, this city.

T. W. W., Boston.—Address W. B. Johnson, 550 Washington Street, Boston.

BASKETBALL, CRICKET, ETC.

C. T. W., Ballina.—John V. Hatfield's throw of 133yds. 17 1/2 in., at the Union Grounds, Brooklyn, Oct. 13, 1872, is the longest on record with a regular baseball. Ed. Crane claimed to have thrown 130yds. 10 1/2 in. Oct. 13, 1864, in Cincinnati, and 133yds. 5 in. Oct. 19, 1864, in St. Louis, but his performances were never authenticated.

H. O. R., Chicago.—The ball of which having been played. No answers by telegraph or mail.

RAT, Halifax.—The charging by amateur clubs of an entrance fee to spectators does not make them professionals.

W. H. H., Philadelphia.—Arthur Cummings of Brooklyn was the first to introduce curve pitching, he having used that delivery as early as 1870. Martin, the once famous old pitcher of the Mutuals and Eckfords, had several seasons previously introduced what is now known as the "drop ball."

M. R. W., Sing Sing.—The bet is off, unless expressly made "play or pay."

J. W. C., Philadelphia.—F. Vernon and A. H. Trevor made 600 runs in partnership Aug. 4 and 5, 1882, at Ricking Green, England, this being the largest number ever recorded for the wicket.

CARDS.

MANY READERS, Columbus.—The man to the right of the dealer cuts for the deal, and the man to the left cuts for the trump card.

J. W. H., San Francisco.—The count is twenty-three for three 5s, 4 and 4.

R. H., Wilkesbarre.—The games should be counted if both parties were unaware that the card was missing at the previous session.

ROXY.—He was right. The dealer could not legally force upon him a foul hand. The rule whereby it is made impossible to have a control in the draw games also in cases of this kind.

W. W. R., Olmstead.—Yes. He was right. Nobody could legally kick against such a proceeding.

A. and B., Fall River.—A win, the high taking precedence.

Q. B.—A was right. Openers only are compulsory.

T. Detroit.—See the laws which bind the other players also bind him. Being the dealer in no way makes him a privileged person. In the future state the full particulars of disputes when they exist.

A. R. C., New York.—The subsequent plays to legal necessities, it would seem, a redistribution of the hands as claimed by C. We give this merely as a suggestion, not as a decision. B. as everyone admits, committed a grave error, but surely it can be righted by the method above described only. A and B were partly right in their assertions. The point disputed should mutually be arbitrated among yourselves. It savors somewhat of the double deck game, which places it entirely beyond our province, one of the latest, and the most serious, of the game.

H. S. T., Philadelphia.—1. It was a misdeal. The act of one partner invariably binds the other. As it is in every day life, so it is in cards. You acknowledge in one breath that it was a misdeal, and then in the next pointedly ask us to frame a decision otherwise. Such a proceeding would, indeed, be too ironical, not to mention the injustice. Sorry, but we can't give fairly a decision favoring both sides. The knave turned does not count. 2. No possible combination can be formed of the cards in hand or crib to make 19, 25, 26 or 27.

A. D. S., Baltimore.—He could not legally melt 150 and then 40. It must be called the other way.

RING.

R. W. W., Middletown.—The fight between Jack Dempsey and George La Blanche in this city on March 14, 1888, and was won by Dempsey after fighting thirteen rounds in 50m. 5s.

R. H., Buffalo.—They can all be addressed in care of this office.

F. McC., Greenville.—We have no one to recommend.

DICE, DOMINOES.

A. B. McC., Chicago.—A wins.
J. M., Chicago.—Your last statement is directly opposite to the one formerly put. Our previous decision, which was justly made in conformity with the wager as then stated, holds good. You show a seeming desire to hedge. There could be no tie. The die to win was compelled to overtop B's throw. This he did not do. Therefore, B is entitled to the stakes. Our work would be much less onerous if when stating disputes for arbitration all the particulars were stated in full and as they actually occurred. Greater satisfaction would also be given to the persons involved, as you can readily see.

ATHLETIC.

SCOTT.—Unless weights were expressly barred, B loses. Geo. W. Hamilton has jumped 14ft. 9 1/2 in., in one standing jump, using weights, as professionals usually do. C. T., Montreal.—John R. Barnes has no record of having run one hundred yards in 9 1/2 seconds, although he may have been reported to have run the distance from a flying start in that time. Races that are not run from a standing start do not form a record in pedestrianism.

AQUATIC.

W. N. P., Tacoma.—The boat was the property of Norman L. Munro, the publisher, of this city, but we do not know to whom she now belongs. Mr. Munro also owned the Now Then, and at present owns the Day When.

TURF.

F. H., Leadville.—Maud R. was foaled in 1874, and is by Harold, he by Hambletonian, dam Miss Russell, by Pilot Jr.

BILLIARDS, POOL, ETC.

BLACK POOL, Halifax.—$10 generally.

G. F. S., Newark.—A forfeits one ball only by the play mentioned.

MISCELLANEOUS.

F. D. R.—Ira Paine can be addressed in care of THE CLIPPER.

C. F. B., Chicago.—For all records see THE CLIPPER ANNUAL for 1888.

REX HIVE, Plainfield.—Twenty-four is the correct answer.

H. M. W., Providence.—A loses. The tie defeats him cleaning Detroit, Mich.

G. H. N., Sunbury.—We have written to the proper department at Washington for information. Probably an answer will appear in next week's CLIPPER.

H. S.—It has; in 1872, by U. S. Grant, by a majority of 55,466 votes.

CONSTANT READER.—Yes. He can cast the deciding vote.

R. F., Minneapolis.—Scovill Manufacturing Co., 423 Broome Street, this city.

C. K., Brooklyn.—The bet as stated cannot be justly decided. All Americans are by foreigners nicknamed as "D." designated. But in this country, for a number of years past, that term has been by the people of the South and West been given to New Englanders only.

The boy is recognized as a native of this country, of course.

The Central High School Athletic Association of Philadelphia held their Spring sports at the grounds of the University of Pennsylvania on May 30.

Competitions Among Students.

Within the past year an athletic association has been formed among the students of the Newark (N. J.) Academy, and on June 1 their initial annual field meeting was held at the Roseville Athletic Grounds.

The entries numbered over one hundred, and fifty evidence that the new departure at the institution has met with deserved favor in the eyes of the scholars, while the result of the contests attested that the students had not neglected their athletic studies. The games were given under the direction of Dr. C. P. Linhart, gymnastic instructor at the Academy, and the successful competitors were as follows: Running long jump—K. O. Kirtland, 17ft. 4in. 40yds. run—W. R. Hyatt, in 1m. 5 1/2 s. 220yds. second class—E. L. Smith, in 31 1/2 s. Putting the shot—David Oakes, 20ft. 7 1/2 in. 100yds. run, first class—H. B. There were three entries, and the result was as follows: Santa Rosa, 48s.; Petaluma, 48 1/2 s.; Napa, 51s. The first two companies broke the State record, which was 48 1/2 s. The next was the hose team race, each team to consist of twelve men, to run 300 yards to hydrant, attach hose on hydrant, lay 300ft. hose, break coupling and put on pipe, time to be called when water left pipe. Result: Petaluma team, 1m. 11s.; Alert of Napa, 1m. 15s.; Healdsburg, 1m. 35s. The Petalumas broke the State record to hydrant, viz., 38s. The last was the firemen's race, 400 yards. W. Higby of Santa Rosa took the lead, followed by R. S. Adams, who was about twenty yards behind until they passed the 300 yards mark, when Adams gained on Higby, winning the race by eight inches. About 3,000 people witnessed the races. Tug-of-war—Final pull: The Columbia College team composed of Eugene Clapp, E. C. Robinson, J. I. Robinson, and J. F. Weigand, New York A. C., beat the Association by an inch and a half, after getting the most of the send off.

Barkley's base hit was the deciding feature.

Burns took his place as pitcher during the remainder of the contest, and did fairly well. Hecker held the Baltimores down to eight hits, five of which were

CHESS.

To Correspondents.

E. A. BENJAMIN, Menomonee, Wis.—Truly, we never welcomed a new visitor on our quarter deck with more satisfactory credentials. Come often, please.

J. A. CARSON.—Behold the fruits of patient waiting. SIO. HARTMAN, Baltimore.—Another newcomer welcome. Glad to have interested you, answered below, come often, please.

S. LIPSCHEITZ.—All you await that we are possessed of a praiseworthy penchant for enriching our chess books with the autographs of their authors? We have Mr. Gossip's, but not yours; you know our address—'nuff said.

J. C. BIRD.—So the boys have "kiboshed" this last effort, have they? Well, it is a way they have—when they can. Our "Petrol" below are inscribed to you, Gossip's "Manual" devotes pp. 71-84 to it, on which Mr. Lipschitz has not a single criticism. We should have preferred a part of the illustrative games to have shown victories for the opening.

THE EIGHT QUEENS' PUZZLE.—"Euclid," in last Chess Monthly, says he "is not aware that any one has completely worked out all the positions and shown how many there are." We have a beautiful MS. in my former contributor, Edward H. Courtenay of Washington, without date, but many years ago, executed in colors, giving in fine, large diagrams the whole of the ninety-two positions, successively and systematically arranged in the order in which they can be reached, under the motto "decendo ducimus." In Lowenthal and Medley's "Congress of '62," p. LXXVII. The execution of our copy is extremely neat, as first stated, that came from Mr. Courtenay's hands. "Euclid" has given some interesting addenda by way of notes; but he, like some American scribblers, should be sure that his originalities are original before giving them their conspicuous exhibition. An English work so well known in chess history and literature as the "Congress of '62," is pretty common property.

STILL ANOTHER match in Boston; and, in consideration of the great local interest, we think the Mass. Chess Association did wisely in postponing the projected tournament on Decoration Day. In the current major tournament the young Mr. Burdette is leading; in the minor, a handicapped Mr. Harding is far ahead. The new match mentioned was also set on foot, and a prize offered by Mr. Palmer. Mr. Burdette was to be one player, his antagonist to be selected by lot from the circle of first rates. The choice fell upon Mr. Ware. The games open thus: 1. P to K4; 2. K to K3; 3. Q to B3; 4. P to Q4; 5. K to P3; 6. K to K3; 7. P to Q4; 8. K to P3; 9. Q to B3; 10. K to P3; 11. Q to B3; 12.
